- Parish temple Saint Nicholas the Wonderworker - heir to a church built in 1834, and the famous St. Nicholas School, which educated many young people, including Vasil Levski. Destroyed during the Russian-Turkish War and rebuilt between 1896 and 1909.
- Parish Temple Holy Trinity - related to the tragic history of Stara Zagora during the Russian-Turkish War of Liberation. In 1877, thousands of innocent Stara Zagora residents were killed here, seeking refuge in the temple. It was restored after the Liberation.
- Parish temple Presentation of the Blessed Virgin Mary - on the site of the destroyed church during the battles for Stara Zagora during the Russian-Turkish War of Liberation was built a new one, completed in 1881. Here on October 5, 1912, after a solemn prayer, King Ferdinand read the manifesto announcing the start of the Balkan War in 1912.
- Cathedral of Saint Dimitar (martyr) – built in the period 1859-1861, witnessing the most significant events in the history of the city during the Renaissance. Two of them - the life and work of Vasil Levski in Stara Zagora and the welcoming of the Russian liberation troops and the Bulgarian militia in the city, are depicted on murals by Prof. Nikola Kozuharov. In the yard of the church is the Hilendar convent, historically connected with the life and work of Vasil Levski.
